EXCERPT

“Try her comm again,” Rafe called as Tristin stalked away, his long legs eating up the sandy soil.

It took hardly any time at all to leave a message on the main computer, lock up the ship and retrace his steps to where he'd seen her last. He followed the direction she'd been heading and made his way to the cluster of stores she frequented whenever they came to the market.

Fabrique from Tajeek, out-of-this-world chocolates, healing waters from Oasis 9, and finally, aphrodisiacs. Fruits, candies, dust and drinks, the tidy little stall had it all.

He spoke to the proprietor in her native language and was surprised that she remembered him. She went on and on about how good it was to see Isis again and how glad she was that they enjoyed her products.

Patience wearing thin, he held up a hand and offered her a small smile. “So you've seen Isis today?”

The ancient nodded and began talking again, her hands flying along with her words.

He thanked her for the information and stepped to the next booth, where Isis had evidently headed next. He had a similar conversation with that proprietor and then stepped to the next stall. The man said he'd seen her cut down the alley behind the booths.

Rafe called Tristin on the comm and filled him in.

“I see you. Wait for me,” Tristin said. A few moments later they were side by side, heading down the alley.

Tristin’s comm buzzed and he answered immediately.

The sound of Isis’s scream coming through the tiny speaker made Rafe’s heart stop mid-beat.
