The Burning Question for Blacks: Who Are We? Randolph Kinsey and Carl Warren

This book answers the question for Blacks as to who they are, how they got to be the way that they are and what they must do to get where they need to be. Blacks have been beaten up so badly by the racist rhetoric and actions of racist bigots until they no longer know "who they are." Blacks have become so confused as to their identity until they let other races of people define them. As a result, they act out these predefined roles and live negative lives. The authors of this book have made an attempt to explain and to show how Blacks got to this stage in life. Moreover, the authors are providing critical information that informs them of what they must do to get back to being their true selves. The book offers a ten step solution that Blacks of all ages, socio-economic positions, political affiliations and educational levels can employ to improve their overall standings. After reading this book, African people should be able to answer with pride and confidence "who they are" and live a much better life.
